

The Stiller Family Foundation Makes $1 Million Pledge to Burlington, Vermont's King Street Center

Pledge supports King Street's Raise the Bar Capital Campaign to fund construction of a new building that will enable expansion of children's and family programs

BURLINGTON, VT May 16, 2013 The Stiller Family Foundation, the charitable foundation of Bob and Christine Stiller and their three children today announced their pledge of $1 million to the King Street Center of Burlington, Vermont, in support of its Raise the Bar Capital Campaign. The campaign was established to fund the construction of a new building in downtown Burlington that will enable expansion of its children's and family programs.

Bob and Christine Stiller and the Stiller Family Foundation are long-time supporters of the King Street Center, supporting the center's goal to give children and families the skills and support necessary for a healthy and productive future.

"We have known and admired the King Street Center for many years and have enjoyed watching it grow and change with the needs of the Burlington community," said Bob Stiller. "The Stiller family is proud to support the center help kids to thrive in a bigger, better space and offer responsive, relevant programming for 21st century learning. I know that the King Street Center will continue to be a cornerstone of our community in the years ahead."

Vicky Smith, executive director of King Street Center, said, "The Stiller Family Foundation is the heart and soul behind this building project. All of us here at King Street Center will remember their generosity as we work hard to honor their gift each and every day - by providing children and families in Burlington the best opportunities for success for generations to come."
